Overview

Navid Bayar is a Silicon Valley trial lawyer representing clients in their most important antitrust and intellectual property litigations. He has extensive experience handling all aspects of complex commercial disputes involving technology companies, from initial case work-up through trial or successful settlement.

Navid is known to be a creative lawyer who looks beyond immediate litigation goals to understand how legal issues fit into each client's broader business objectives. He immerses himself in his clients' businesses to master industry-specific nuances that enable him to communicate complex concepts clearly and persuasively to judges and arbitrators. Clients value his ability to make complex situations understandable and his talent for generating novel solutions when conventional approaches fall short.

When Navid is not in court or in the office, he enjoys skiing or playing tennis. He lives in Berkeley with his wife and two dogs.

Whether we are on offense or defense, I come to work every day with one objective: fiercely advocating for my clients. Few things make me happier than having their trust to handle the legal side of things so that they can focus on building a dominant business.”
