

Jason Hipp Participates in Columbia Law School National Security Law Panel

Event

March 11, 2026

Speakers: Jason P. Hipp

On March 11, Partner Jason Hipp participated in a national security law panel hosted by the National Security Law Society at Columbia Law School. The event, co-sponsored by the Columbia Business Law Association, brought together practitioners from leading law firms to discuss emerging issues at the intersection of private practice and national security and career paths in the field.

The discussion focused on the panelists' career trajectories and the evolving role of private practitioners in addressing national security challenges. Topics included cybersecurity, commercial litigation, human rights, white-collar defense, and the increasingly complex regulatory and enforcement landscape facing global companies. Jason discussed the use of the Anti-Terrorism Act and other private rights of action as a means to counter terrorist financing and other national security challenges.

Related Attorneys

Jason P. Hipp

Partner

jhipp@jenner.com

+1 212 407 1784

Related Capabilities

National Security and Crisis

Stay Informed

