London Partner Rob Dalling was featured in Law360's coverage of the UK government's 2026-2029 fraud strategy and its implications for financial services firms. Rob offered his observations on the tension between the government's data-sharing ambitions and existing data protection obligations:

"For this type of data, stricter processing rules apply, and companies may be reluctant to share this sort of information unless formally compelled to. The new strategy will not protect companies that engage in the indiscriminate sharing of personal data."
