Overview

Brandon R. Thompson is a Special Counsel in the firm’s Communications, Internet, and Technology Practice where he advises clients at the intersection of regulation and corporate transactions. He draws on substantial experience assisting clients with communications-related regulatory compliance. His Federal Communications Commission (FCC) regulatory practice includes radio and satellite licensing, license transfers and assignments, and equipment authorization compliance.

Brandon also advises clients on a broad range of telecommunications matters, including compliance with national security issues related to the Secure Networks Act and “covered” telecommunications and surveillance equipment; compliance with the Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act (CALEA), Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), the STIR/SHAKEN framework, emergency alert, and E911 rules as well as customer proprietary network information (CPNI) rules. He has also guided clients to more than $20 million in federal telecommunications-related grants.

Prior to joining the firm, Brandon was a lawyer in the Attorney Honors Program in the Federal Communications Commission’s Enforcement Bureau, where he led numerous TCPA and Truth in Caller ID Act enforcement actions in coordination with state attorneys general and the US Department of Justice.
