September 17, 2026

Partner Lucy Blake commented in a Dow Jones Risk article examining how, despite declining US Foreign Corrupt Practices Act enforcement, anti-corruption remains a significant compliance risk for global companies. The article explores new EU legislation harmonizing member states' anti-bribery laws and the UK's expanded powers for its Serious Fraud Office.

"There's an increased anti-corruption vigor in the E.U. and U.K., which tout anti-corruption as the priority, and FCPA is still a compliance risk, in spite of the recent drop."

Lucy helps clients prevent, investigate, respond to, and recover from bribery, fraud, and money laundering. She is Co-Chair of the firm's Human Rights and Global Strategy Practice and frequently advises on multi-jurisdictional anti-corruption compliance and parallel cross-border investigations by prosecutors and regulators, including the SFO, FCA, and US DOJ.
