The session, titled "Protecting Privilege Across Borders: Perspectives from France, South Korea, and the United States," will compare how attorney-client privilege is treated under French, South Korean, and US law. Panelists will discuss recent developments in each jurisdiction and offer practical guidance on protecting confidential communications, conducting internal investigations, managing disclosure, and addressing privilege issues raised by artificial intelligence.

Sarah is a former federal prosecutor who guides clients through high-stakes litigation and government investigations, including matters in Investigations, Compliance, and Defense.
