Ashley, who previously served as General Counsel to House Speaker Mike Johnson, weighed in on the pace at which companies and individuals under scrutiny should expect to respond to congressional document requests if control of Congress changes hands. When facing congressional scrutiny, preparedness is key. Democrats won't drag their feet in launching aggressive oversight.

Ashley Callen is Co-Chair of the firm's Congressional Investigations Practice. Before joining Jenner & Block, she served as General Counsel to Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) and to then-Majority Leader Steve Scalise (R-LA), and held senior investigative roles across several House committees, including the Oversight and Government Reform Committee and the Judiciary Committee.
