Partner Emily Loeb Discusses What the 2026 Midterms Mean for Congressional Oversight in the Financial Times

Publications

November 4, 2026

Partner Emily Loeb, co-chair of Jenner & Block's Congressional Investigations Practice, was quoted in the Financial Times in an article examining how companies are preparing for congressional oversight as the new Congress takes shape following the 2026 midterm elections.

The article explores how congressional investigations have become an increasingly common tool for lawmakers of both parties, and what that means for executives and the broader private sector. Emily shares insights on how congressional investigators see companies as a source for information, and on how she counsels clients who are drawn into investigations even when they have not been accused of wrongdoing.
