Overview

Effiong Dampha helps clients in legal ethics matters, protecting law firms and their lawyers from exposure including malpractice suits, disqualification motions, and court investigations. Effiong's recent representations include securing dismissal of a malpractice suit related to employment claims, settling another suit related to private equity and successfully representing clients through an order to show cause.

In addition to representing law firms, Effiong also defends multinational consumer goods companies against class actions, energy companies in contract disputes, and regularly advises domestic and Japanese clients seeking straightforward answers on a wide range of regulatory issues including the CCPA and ADA compliance. Having broad knowledge in a variety of areas, he brings a unique, cross-cutting perspective to his cases.
