Overview

Mark Davis represents companies from around the world in unfair competition disputes, such as alleged patent infringement, trade secret misappropriation, and antitrust violations. Much of his work has been for innovation leaders in the tech and life sciences industries.

With over 50 trials and hundreds of disputes under his belt, Mark truly understands all forms of dispute resolution. In addition to handling numerous matters before the US International Trade Commission, the Federal Circuit, and the district courts, he also has significant experience in handling global disputes encompassing multiple international venues.

Mark is a forward-thinking lawyer—he looks beyond the immediate litigation goals to see how the issues at hand fit into the larger business goals of the client. He adds further value by guiding clients through evolving legal trends and providing insight into how possible changes in the law might affect their businesses.

I identify and solve problems for my clients as soon as possible so that they can concentrate on what matters most to them – the success of their business.”
