Overview

Andrew Hoeg guides clients through the e-discovery process in internal investigations and litigation matters. He provides counsel on evidence preservation, collection, review, and production. Andrew focuses on leveraging technology and data analytics to develop a streamlined approach to discovery. He has extensive experience managing e-discovery in high-stakes investigations and litigation.

As a seasoned litigator, Andrew understands how discovery strategies can inform legal outcomes. He works closely with clients and IT professionals to efficiently and effectively manage discovery in litigation and investigations. Andrew served on the firm team that performed an independent investigation into the Chicago Blackhawks' response to allegations that in 2010 a player was sexually assaulted by an assistant coach. He also regularly represents clients in complex contract and business disputes. Andrew is experienced in all phases of litigation through trial.
