Overview

Jenna Ross helps clients ranging from Fortune 500 companies to privately held businesses and individuals resolve high-stakes disputes. She has substantial experience litigating claims involving breaches of contract, fraud, business torts, and anticompetitive or unfair practices in both court and arbitration. Clients in the technology and financial services space, in particular, turn to Jenna when they are navigating disputes involving highly sophisticated and complex products and transactions.

From pre-litigation negotiation to trial and appeal, Jenna is a zealous advocate who always keeps client objectives at the forefront. She approaches advocacy with a deep understanding of the different strategic goals of litigation and how to achieve them. In some cases, she works to minimize business disruption and avoid reputational harm. In others, she uses litigation as a tool to shape a client's future business opportunities. In every case, Jenna prioritizes clear and consistent communication with clients. She is adept at framing the big picture succinctly and in the language of business, analyzing claims or expected counterclaims in a way that informs confident decision-making.

Jenna gained inside knowledge of how courts decide cases as a judicial law clerk. She calls on that experience when developing and delivering legal arguments. She digs deep and quickly masters the details of the case, often spotting legal issues or facts she can use to her client's advantage.

Jenna's active pro bono practice focuses on reproductive rights advocacy. She serves on Jenner's Reproductive Health Task Force and regularly counsels clients on how to navigate the dynamic legal landscape resulting from the Dobbs decision.

Successful dispute resolution looks different in each case. My focus is always on my client's goals — aligning them with the best achievable outcome and working tirelessly to achieve it.”
