Overview

Phil Sailer counsels Fortune 100 corporations on public policy issues and, more specifically, on matters involving interactions with multiple governmental bodies and agencies. Phil advises multinational corporations on congressional and regulatory inquiries, key strategic business plans, and international disputes with public and private parties.

Phil also works closely with clients to review compliance programs and conduct proactive business and legal risk assessments into corruption, fraud, and other risk areas. He collaborates closely with in-house legal teams on internal investigations and routinely presents key investigative findings and recommendations to corporate executives for review and consideration. Phil's work involves working with companies in a multitude of industries, including energy, technology, and defense, on key strategic issues that requires engagement with multidisciplinary teams, from key business groups to government affairs teams. He is also a thought leader on several areas of law, including civil RICO, regulatory compliance, and public policy matters.
