

House Rule Changes Suggest More Liberal Use of Deposition Authority in New Congress

Publications

January 10, 2019

By: Emily M. Loeb, Andrew C. Noll

With the 116th Congress now sworn in, the Democratic Majority in the House of Representatives is poised to begin aggressively exercising its oversight authority. Indeed, House Democrats appear prepared to initiate a slew of investigations into the Administration of President Donald Trump.¹ As we have previously noted in-house counsel should be attuned to these developments, as the business community will almost certainly face renewed scrutiny from the new House majority.

Read the full alert here.

Related Attorneys

Emily M. Loeb

Partner

eloeb@jenner.com

+1 202 639 6000

Related Capabilities

Government Controversies and Public Policy Litigation

Investigations, Compliance, and Defense

Related Locations

Washington, DC

© 2026 Jenner & Block LLP. Attorney Advertising. Jenner & Block LLP is an Illinois Limited Liability Partnership including professional corporations. This publication, presentation, or event is not intended to provide legal advice but to provide information on legal matters and/or firm news of interest to our clients and colleagues. Readers or attendees should seek specific legal advice before taking any action with respect to matters mentioned in this publication or at this event. The attorney responsible for this communication is Brent E. Kidwell, Jenner & Block LLP, 353 N. Clark Street, Chicago, IL 60654-3456. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome. Jenner & Block London LLP, an affiliate of Jenner & Block LLP, is a limited liability partnership established under the laws of the State of Delaware, USA and is authorised and regulated by the Solicitors Regulation Authority with SRA number 615729. Information regarding the data we collect and the rights you have over your data can be found in our Privacy Notice. For further inquiries, please contact dataprotection@jenner.com.

Stay Informed

