On Wednesday, March 11, 2020, the Office of Attorney General Xavier Becerra published its second modifications to the proposed regulations for the California Consumer Privacy Act of 2018 (CCPA), which were last modified on February 7, 2020, and originally published on October 11, 2019. According to the attorney general, after the first modifications were published, his office received “around 100” public comments. These modifications were made in response to those comments and to clarify and conform the previously proposed regulations.

The deadline to submit written comments regarding these new modifications is Friday, March 27, 2020, at 5:00 pm.

While the second set of modification includes a number of technical changes, in this article are some of the more significant changes, which we anticipate will have an impact on businesses as they work towards preparing for the July 1, 2020, enforcement deadline.
