April 30, 2021

The second edition of Global Data Review’s “40 under 40” highlights “individuals who represent the best and the brightest of the data law bar around the world.” In his profile feature, Partner David P. Saunders gives a brief look into his data privacy work and shares why he chose to focus his practice on this particular industry. He talks about the mentors who have helped him over the course of his career, naming Partners Barbara S. Steiner, Megan B. Poetzel, and Ross B. Bricker among those who taught him what it is to be a lawyer. Mr. Saunders discusses what he would change about data privacy law and how COVID-19 has affected his work. He shares insights on what the next big data opportunities are for businesses, key data risks, and what he does in his free time to relax. “I have two small children, and they keep me busy when I’m not at work,” he writes. “Otherwise, a good TV series or televised sporting match is how I unwind.”
