Publications

May 10, 2021

In this article, Jenner & Block Partner Michele L. Slachetka and Associate Christian Plummer examine the key decisions and trends that have emerged from US courts regarding the discoverability (or lack thereof) of litigation funding materials. Revisiting their previous article, the authors address a discoverability issue unique to the international arbitration space and describe how recent decisions remain consistent with the trends they identified one year ago, “as courts have continued to take a strong stance in protecting funding materials, absent unique circumstances.”
