

Client Alert: Congress Targets Foreign Funding within American Colleges and Universities

Publications

June 22, 2021

On June 8, 2021, the Senate passed the US Innovation and Competition Act, a sweeping bipartisan bill that aims to promote America's economic competitiveness and national security by investing nearly $250 billion into scientific research and technological innovation. Lawmakers are particularly intent on combating China's growing economic influence by bolstering domestic production of emerging technologies and preventing unauthorized foreign access to US intellectual property. The bill also contains several provisions that could significantly impact American colleges and universities, particularly institutions engaged in major research projects with foreign funding sources.
