Recognition

September 17, 2021

Partner Alexander J. Hadjis was recognized among Law360's 2021 Intellectual Property MVPs for his successful representation of Roku in the first patent jury trial overseen by US District Judge Alan Albright.

In his feature, Mr. Hadjis discussed how the team beat infringement claims in a trailblazing patent trial, as well as what motivates him and mentoring advice. "Don't look past the little things that you are asked to do or that you have an opportunity to do as you grow and mature as an attorney," he said. "These things provide valuable insight and experience into what you'll ultimately need to do as a more senior attorney when you take on more responsibility and roles directly with a client overseeing a team."

Mr. Hadjis is a trial lawyer and partner in the Patent Litigation and Counseling Practice. Clients faced with high-stakes patent disputes before the federal district courts or the Internal Trade Commission rely on Mr. Hadjis' experience, responsiveness, and winning track record.
