

The Lawfare Podcast: The CLOUD Act Five Years Later

News

February 3, 2023

Partner Aaron Cooper joined the Lawfare Podcast for a discussion marking the fifth year of the CLOUD ACT, which established a novel framework for cross-border data access in criminal and national security investigations. Aaron, who was at the department of justice when the act was signed into law and was recognized with an attorney general's award for his work, discussed the reasons for its development, what it has accomplished in the past five years, and what to expect going forward.

Listen to the episode.

From criminal matters to congressional inquiries, Aaron offers clients rare insight into cutting-edge cyber, national security, and technology policy issues. He leverages his experience as a former lead Senate investigative counsel on the Intelligence Committee and accomplished Department of Justice (DOJ) cybercrime prosecutor to guide clients through complex and sensitive government investigations.
