Overview

Caroline Hirst has robust experience that she gained through serving as a paralegal, an associate, and, more recently, as a law clerk for two federal judges in San Francisco. In that role, she juggled the demands of two separate and busy chambers simultaneously and assisted with two jury trials.

Caroline's pro bono efforts illustrate her longstanding interest in civil rights work. As an associate for a San Francisco firm, she managed immigration cases involving asylum and other forms of immigration relief. As a paralegal for a Chicago firm, Caroline supported the firm's civil rights work, including wrongful conviction, police misconduct, and prisoners' rights cases.
