

Brandon Fox Joins Ana Cabrera Reports on MSNBC to Discuss Protective Order Against Trump and Trial Date

Partner Brandon Fox joined Ana Cabrera Reports on MSNBC to discuss Special Counsel Jack Smith's motion for a protective order against former president Donald Trump and the proposed federal trial start date of January 2, 2024.

"This protective order is more about a fair trial and more about protecting witnesses than it is about sensitive information. This is about not wanting Mr. Trump to intimidate witnesses and not wanting him to be out there potentially making it so the jury pool is not considering the evidence and considering other things instead. This is a good early test for the judge to see if she's going to treat Mr. Trump like any other defendant," Brandon said.

As for the trial schedule, Brandon said, "I think 4-6 weeks seems like a realistic expectation for how long this trial would go. As Jack Smith's office put it, it is in everyone's best interest for this case to go first before the voters have to decide who the Republican nominee will be."
