The Daily Journal recognized Partner Brent Caslin as one of its Top Trade Secrets Lawyers for the fourth year in a row. The annual list honors the “state’s best attorneys focusing on trade secrets matters such as unfair competition and employee mobility.”

Brent’s profile highlights recent work on several trade secret matters, including the Epic Systems trade secret matter. When asked about which trends in the trade secrets field need to be addressed in the near future, Brent responded "This is easy ... Artificial Intelligence. AI applications may learn confidential information, either from behind a firewall or from a third party, including third parties the application's owner may owe confidentiality obligations to. How will they treat it? Many questions will be asked over the next few years surrounding AI and trade secret law, and the law generally, and it will surely be exciting to watch."

The article also discusses Brent’s pro bono work with veterans and their families, including his commitment to the nonprofit EOD Warrior Foundation.
