Overview

Justin helps clients with their litigation needs. He leverages his extensive training in trial advocacy to deliver results at all phases of litigation. He also maintains an active pro bono practice focused on election law, prisoner civil-rights, and wrongful convictions.

Before joining Jenner & Block and while at Harvard Law School, Justin was an Editor-in-Chief of the Harvard Law and Policy Review, a student attorney in the Election Law Clinic, and a research assistant to Professor Lawrence Lessig. Prior to law school while earning a Master of Public Policy, Justin worked at an international human-rights law firm in Paris.
