

“The Role of Advice in Discharging Directors’ Duties,” The Law Society Gazette

Publications

September 11, 2024

By: Clare M.F. Hennessey

Building on our previous article in the Law Society Gazette summarising the landmark judgment in Re BHS Group, Special Counsel Clare Hennessey takes a deeper look at the implications of the judgment for directors. In the latest issue, Clare examines how directors should approach obtaining and considering professional advice in light of this decision.

Clare is Special Counsel in the firm’s London office. Her practice focuses on the resolution of complex commercial disputes via litigation in the English courts.

Clare’s broad experience includes advising clients in relation to complex civil fraud, breaches of contract and warranty, shareholder and joint venture disputes, professional negligence, and competition and regulatory investigations, in sectors including finance, energy, construction, automotive, telecommunications, and professional services. She has particular experience in cartel damages actions before the Competition Appeal Tribunal.
