Government Contractor
Litigation and Compliance

Overview

Jennifer focuses her practice on a wide range of government contracts and grants matters. Jennifer litigates bid protests on behalf of protesters and intervenors before the Government Accountability Office and Court of Federal Claims, and has experience with state and local protests. Jennifer advises clients on contract claims, disputes, and terminations and has represented contractors before the Civilian Board of Contract Appeals and Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals. She also counsels clients on allegations of misconduct and regulatory compliance issues.

Jennifer received her JD, with honors, from The George Washington University Law School, where she served on The George Washington International Law Review and as a member of the GW Law Family Justice Litigation Clinic. While studying, she also interned at the US Commodity Futures Trading Commission in the Whistleblower Office and at the Circuit Court for Prince George's County.
