Law360 writes, “In evaluating candidates for this story, Law360 put a premium on attorneys arguing cases in private practice, rather than in government. One of the advocates who scored high on that metric is Unikowsky, who's been at Jenner & Block LLP for all 11 of his arguments at the Supreme Court. Unikowsky's first appearance before the justices was in 2016, and he will appear again on Monday in Williams v. Washington, the first argument of the forthcoming term.”

“Widely praised as entrepreneurial by Law360's sources, Unikowsky is equipped with a renaissance man skillset,” the publication added.

The article also highlights the cases that Adam has argued before the Supreme Court which have involved Native American Law, public funding for religious schools, and the sovereignty of Puerto Rico.
