David's profile highlights his work successfully securing dismissal of a class action that was filed against online platforms by self-described conservative voters who claimed their speech and voting rights were supposedly violated by content moderation practices. It also highlights his work defending major tech companies using Section 230 protections against complaints coming from both sides of the political spectrum.

When asked about crisis management, David said, "If you can be the calmest person in the room, or at least appear to be the calmest, that's going to help you and it will actually help everybody else."

Studios, networks, and tech companies rely on David, Co-Chair of the firm's Content, Media, and Entertainment Practice, to handle their most high-profile disputes.
