He will join the panel "Navigating Ethics and Professionalism Requirements in Securities Law Practice," which will address legal ethics and professional responsibility issues attorneys face in SEC practice, including whistleblower rules, lawyers' roles as gatekeepers, internal investigations, and client conflict and disclosure obligations.

Greg defends clients in litigation and government investigations involving complex financial products and counsels market participants on regulatory and compliance matters. He works closely with the firm's Investigation, Compliance and Defense Practice on investigations conducted by financial regulators and the Department of Justice.
