Partner Lucy Blake shares insights on the rising pressure multinational companies face in managing environmental and human rights risks across global operations. In an article for International Bar Association Multimedia Journalist, Lucy highlights how “companies are increasingly under pressure to take responsibility, not just for their own operations but also for third parties in respect of human rights and environmental harms.”

Her comments reflect a broader trend in climate and ESG-related litigation targeting corporate accountability beyond borders. Lucy says, “recently introduced corporate due diligence and transparency requirements in the EU are another example of the growing pressure on companies to root out human rights harms and environmental misconduct in their business operations.”

Lucy was also quoted in Newscabal's coverage of the story.
