Overview

Andrew Rohrbach is a skilled counselor and trial lawyer who guides clients through their most consequential regulatory and enforcement matters, drawing on years of experience leading sensitive investigations and complex litigation at the highest levels of the federal government.

At the US Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York (SDNY), Andrew served as Co-Chief of the General Crimes Unit, where he supervised prosecutors on a variety of financial crime and violence prosecutions. He previously served as a senior member of SDNY's Public Corruption Unit, where he handled major corruption and bribery cases, including the prosecution of FTX founder Sam Bankman-Fried. Andrew represented the United States in multiple trials and appellate arguments, serving on teams that earned recognition including the Director's Award for Superior Performance by a Litigative Team and the Federal Drug Agents Foundation's True American Hero Award.

Earlier in his career, Andrew served as Associate Counsel in the Office of the White House Counsel, where he represented the President and the White House in significant high-profile investigations and congressional oversight inquiries, and as an attorney with the Department of Justice Civil Division's Appellate Staff, where he briefed and argued civil cases in the federal courts of appeal and provided advice to the Solicitor General on appellate strategy.

His practice at Jenner focuses on helping clients navigate:

- Government investigations and regulatory enforcement
- Public corruption and FCPA matters
- Securities and cryptocurrency fraud cases
- Institutional and higher education inquiries
- Politically sensitive and cross-institutional reviews
- Civil litigation
