Overview

Jack supports Jenner's litigation and pro bono practices through targeted research and drafting.

Jack earned his JD from Yale Law School, where he was an active member of the Veterans Legal Services Clinic and the Rule of Law Clinic. In these roles, he worked on impact litigation, including filing lawsuits on behalf of transgender servicemembers and veterans. He also served as a teaching assistant in Civil Procedure. Yale Law School awarded Jack the Charles G. Albom Prize for excellence in appellate advocacy in connection with a clinical program. Before law school, Jack served for four years as a US Army Field Artillery Officer stationed in Germany and later spent a year in Washington, DC, working on Capitol Hill.
