January 12, 2026

Partner James Rogers, Special Counsel Ronan O'Reilly, and Associate Connor Gray discuss key developments in international arbitration in 2025 and emerging trends for 2026 in an article published by Law.com.

Read More

2025 marked a significant year for international arbitration, with the UK enacting significant amendments to the Arbitration Act 1996, an acceleration of AI integration in arbitral processes (including the LCIA's strategic collaboration with Jus Mundi), and global geopolitical factors impacting sectors and disputes.

Looking ahead to 2026, arbitration practitioners should prepare for further geopolitical instability, increased trade and climate-related disputes, and even more AI involvement in arbitral proceedings.
